

PROMOTING USER INVOLVEMENT IN MENTAL HEALTH RESEARCH

Suresearch is a Midlands network of Service Users in Research and Education. Its members include users and survivors of mental health services, carers and allies who have an interest in, and experience of, mental health research.

Suresearch, based at the University of Birmingham since 2000, aims to promote the involvement of mental health service users in all aspects of research, including training, design, data collection, data analysis and the dissemination and application of research findings.

Suresearch members have a wide range of research knowledge, skills and experience. They can provide advice and consultancy to new and established mental health researchers and research projects and undertake commissioned service user led research as well as collaborative research with academic researchers and practitioners.
